CM: Can you share your goals and plans for the future

HPL: I work as the clinic director of a polyclinic, so my immediate goal is to really get my clinic colleagues to bond and move forward as one; and strengthen our work with other partners in the community. When things are less hectic at home, I want to take up more of the graduate diplomas in important areas like mental health and palliative care. Unrelated to work, I want to learn watercolour painting and roller-blading.

Change of Censor-in-Chief

Interviewed by Dr Fok Wai Yee Rose, FCFP(S), Editor (Team A)

College Mirror (CM): Dear Dr Paul, a big thank you for being Censor-in-Chief of the College of Family Physicians since 2015, where you played a key role overseeing and setting the standards in all the training programmes conducted in the College of Family Physicians, Singapore. These include the Graduate Diploma in Family

Dr Paul Goh

Medicine, Master of Medicine (Family Medicine), Collegiate as well as the Fellowship of the College of Family Physicians Programmes.

As you pass on the baton to the incoming Censor-in-Chief, Dr Darren Seah, we wish you all the best as you continue to contribute as Council member, CFPS and advisor to our training programmes.

Dear Dr Darren, we welcome you as our new Censor-in-Chief (CIC) of the College of Family Physicians. May we know your thoughts when you were invited as CIC?

Dr Darren Seah (DS): I was deeply humbled, honoured and occasionally intimidated by having to wear these shoes which have been filled by many well respected and illustrious family physicians before me. Frankly there are probably others more qualified than me for this as they have had more experience with the Censors board previously. But I'm happy to support the College in anyway.

CM: We understand that you are the Director, Family Medicine Development at National Healthcare Group Polyclinics. Does this experience place in a favourable position to further develop Family Medicine training as CIC?

DS: I understand that the position of CIC is fundamental in College's mission of providing postgraduate education to family physicians and I hope to serve Council and members well in this role. Hopefully my own work experiences helming medical education in NHGP will come in useful over the next couple of years.

CM: What do you foresee as the immediate task and challenges of your new role?

DS: The immediate foreseeable task is to continue the good work that my predecessor Dr Paul Goh has built. There is some urgency to ensure the smooth execution of the FCFP(S) exams in the coming few months. Once again, there is obviously the challenges of COVID safe management measures but I think we've developed a good system and know-how to run the exit interview securely over the video conferencing platform.

CM: What are your goals and plans for the future for family medicine training?

DS: I would like to think of the future goals and plans in 2 broad aspects. Firstly, faculty development especially looking at enhancing examiner training and standardisation at fellowship exam level and also developing more senior family physicians who can take on this role. This is important given our increasing number of family medicine residents and trainees in the pipeline. One can expect more of them to progress on to fellowship training in future years and we must develop our examination capacity beyond what we have currently. Secondly, I hope to work closely with our course directors of various programs to strengthen and enhance the mechanisms of the evaluation and educational quality improvement such that training in family medicine is brought to a higher standard. Given the emphasis on generalist training, it is imperative to ensure we continue to train family physicians who are mission ready and fit for purpose in all settings that we practice in.
